Dear conference organiser Annetje Ottow welcomes you

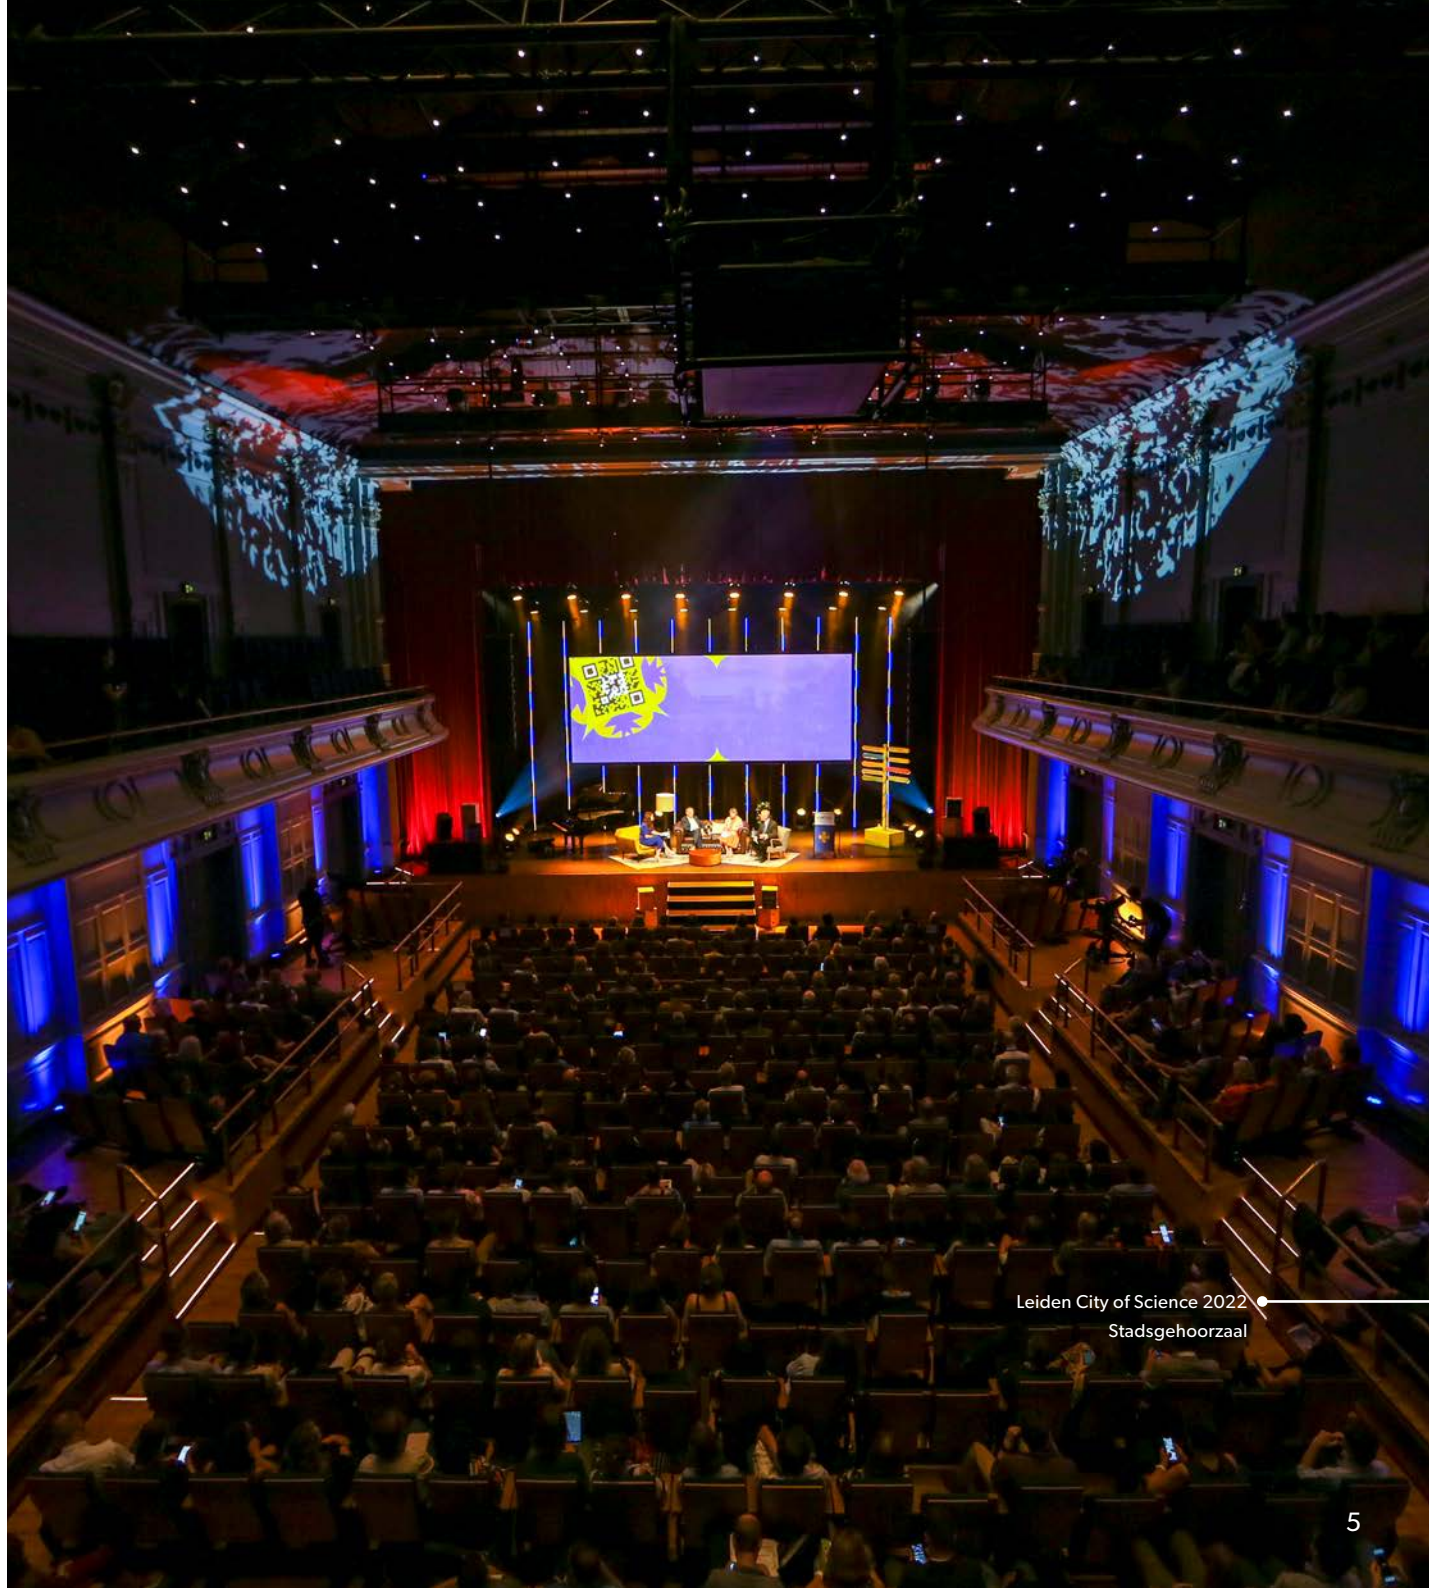

Leiden is a city where science has long prevailed. Since the establishment of Leiden University in 1575, Leiden has flourished under the influence of the many scientists who have settled in the city. Leiden has always been a welcoming city where talented scientists could find, meet and inspire each other. Their encounters have led to countless innovations; the reason Leiden is known as the city of discoveries. The power of these encounters has always been greater than the sum of its parts - in the past, present and future.

Leiden is a city where the past meets the future on a daily basis. The city centre, with its many monuments, showcases the city's extensive history. Just outside the city centre is the Leiden Bio Science Park: the largest Life Sciences & Health Cluster in the Netherlands and a leading world-class innovation district. Here, major scientific research institutes work on innovations that make and keep people healthy. The meetings and joint efforts of the talents in Leiden therefore affect us all.

For this reason, as a significant international conference destination, Leiden welcomes these encounters with open arms. I warmly invite you, as a conference organiser, to experience Leiden's hospitality for yourself and discover how meetings in Leiden can contribute to the legacy of your conference. Because the beauty of organising a meeting in Leiden is that the whole city serves as its stage. And that is a wonderful experience to behold.

May we meet in Leiden!

Great Minds Meet in Leiden

Where science and culture always go hand in hand

Leiden – an academic city of stature

Over the centuries, the city with the first university in the Netherlands has always been able to prove its deserved position in the leading academic world. The strength of Leiden University is supported by the diversity of researchers and scientific disciplines, represented in the university's seven faculties: Archaeology, Humanities, Medicine, Governance and Global Affairs, Law, Social and Behavioural Sciences and Mathematics and Natural Sciences. Furthermore, thanks to the growth of international conferences and scientific events, Leiden has managed to maintain a strong reputation and serves as an internationally recognised platform for knowledge transfer and discussion.

On the shoulders of giants

Ever since the foundation of the first university in the Netherlands in 1575, Leiden has been a city where innovation and scientific discovery have thrived. With a prestigious library, botanical garden, observatory and academic hospital, the university quickly acquired a reputation that attracted scholars from all over Europe.

The contributions of Leiden scientists have been diverse and comprehensive over the centuries. They have made great discoveries in every field of thought: from medicine to astronomy, physics, mathematics and animal behaviour. This talent is recognised worldwide; since 1901, there have been 16 Nobel Prize winners with a connection to Leiden. The establishment of the Leiden Bio Science Park in 1984 anchored the desire to innovate in Leiden, a city that continues to follow the path of leading research in areas such as space, biomedical sciences and immunology. Worldwide notables in science, such as Albert Einstein, Johan Huizinga and Johan Rudolph Thorbecke, have forever linked their name to the city of Leiden. We will continue to build on the impact of Leiden as an international city of science on the shoulders of these giants. Leiden has always been a home to countless bright minds who have come to the city to be free in their thinking and to share their ideas.

Life Sciences & Health Innovation

Leiden Bio Science Park houses the largest concentration of Life Science research, education and business in the Netherlands and is one of Europe's five most successful science parks. It houses more than 150 Life Sciences & Health organisations, such as the Leiden University Medical Center, the Leiden Faculty of Science, Top Institute Pharma, TNO (Dutch Organisation for Applied Scientific Research), Naturalis Biodiversity Centre and more than a hundred specialised companies in the field of medical life sciences. These companies range from large international players to start-ups.

Leiden Bio Science Park is anything but a collection of individual companies. On the contrary, the synergy between the research institutes and the companies, the companies themselves and patient care guarantee an outcome much more powerful than the sum of its parts. As a result, there have been resounding successes of medication used worldwide that relieve or cure patients and their lives and combat or even prevent life-threatening conditions.

Leiden Continuum

Knowledge and Culture as DNA of Leiden

Leiden was meant to be. The transformation of Leiden into a city where knowledge and culture have always served as its foundation is the product of countless stories, discoveries and developments that have taken place on this soil. Throughout history and the present, Leiden has welcomed religious and economic refugees from other countries with open arms and has invested in attracting top scientists from all over the world. The encounters in Leiden between the people behind these stories have always encouraged sharing knowledge and skills, resulting in new stories and developments. All these encounters have made Leiden the city it is today.

The still cherished freedom of thought was and is dominant in Leiden's DNA. This freedom reached its first milestone in 1575 with the foundation of the "Leiden University to safeguard (academic) freedom". The resulting academic, cultural and international climate is reflected in contemporary Leiden: City of Discoveries. The Leiden Bio Science Park, the Leiden University Medical Center and the Naturalis Biodiversity Center, among others, bear witness to this, as well as the world-renowned collections in the thirteen museums – four of which are national museums – in Leiden.

Precursor of culture

Leiden has many famous sons and daughters. Of all those clever minds, most people know Rembrandt van Rijn. Born and educated in Leiden, this is where he laid the foundation for his later worldwide fame. The Young Rembrandt Studio in Leiden still visually tells the story of Rembrandt and his early years in the city. Many other masters followed after Rembrandt, such as Gerrit Dou, Frans van Mieris and Jan Steen, who developed their special technique in Leiden and took it to great heights.

Not only the old Masters called Leiden home. The great name that Leiden has built up in history as a city of knowledge and culture has always brought great minds together. It is, therefore, no coincidence that Theo van Doesburg founded the magazine De Stijl in Leiden, the 'Bastion of Freedom'. Theo van Doesburg was a revolutionary in art with grand ambitions: the new, abstract and objective visual language of De Stijl would appeal to everyone and thus ensure greater world harmony. The international art movement that arose around this magazine attracted artists such as Piet Mondriaan, Vilmos Huszár, Bart van der Leek and architects such as J.J.P. Oud and Gerrit Rietveld.

Even today, Leiden relies on its cultural heritage. The world-renowned collections in Leiden's thirteen museums allow visitors to marvel at all kinds of themes that have played a role in Leiden. These collections would never have come together without scientists such as physician and anatomist Herman Boerhaave and physician and nature collector Philipp von Siebold. This is how knowledge and culture in Leiden have always been intertwined. Leiden University is still characterised by its open academic climate and has always attracted scientists from all over the world. Inspiration from future generations of scientists is an essential driving force, and, as mentioned, Leiden was meant to be.

Leiden European City of Science 2022

In 2022, Leiden was the European capital of science for a year: European City of Science. For 365 days, the entire city was transformed into a festival site celebrating science and curiosity. It has been a year packed with activities, conferences, lectures, workshops, excursions, exhibitions and events for anyone with a curious mind. In addition, numerous conventions and remarkable gatherings shed light on the great issues of our time. At the same time, a surprising program was drawn up with and for residents of the city and region, in which each day was centered around a different exciting topic. The main purpose of Leiden European City of Science 2022 was to connect science and society.

ESOF 2022

The title European City of Science is awarded every two years by EuroScience in Strasbourg to a European city. The title is tied to Europe's largest biennial multidisciplinary science conference, the EuroScience Open Forum (ESOF), which has been organised for its 10th edition in Leiden in 2022. ESOF aims to provide scientists with a platform to engage in interdisciplinary and intersectional debate about scientific culture, scientific research and innovation for and with society. The overarching theme of ESOF2022 was: Crossing Borders, Engaged Science, Resilient Societies. With more than 120 sessions and more than 500 speakers from 60 countries, this edition of the conference has been very successful.

Bright Young Minds

Leiden may be a historic city; it is however young at heart: half of its inhabitants are younger than 36 years. These younger generations have been in the spotlight across the European Union in 2022: the European Commission has declared 2022 the 'European Year of Youth'. It is therefore no wonder that in 2022, Leiden partnered with the European Year of Youth to create the 'Bright Young Minds' program. Bright Young Minds was the moment to give the bright minds of the future a platform to discuss and find solutions to social issues. This was the aim of the European Contest for Young Scientists and the EU TalentOn: to challenge young academics to present their scientific projects and to come together in competition form to become game changers in solving major issues.

"The fact that we have been awarded this conference re-emphasises our scientific position as a city of knowledge once again."

Ferry Breedveld and Corinne Hofman (Champions of ESOF 2022)

Themed Weeks

This year has also left considerable impact on Leiden. Starting this year and continuously in the future, we organise several yearly 'themed weeks'. Examples are the Days of Art & Science, the Life Sciences & Health Week, and The Space Week. Leiden European City of Science 2022 has taught us that events of a certain theme, organised within a limited amount of time, are boosted in both interest and impact enormously. Are you interested in hosting a conference in any of these themes? Contact Leiden Convention Bureau to discuss whether your conference can be a part of these themed weeks. This way, your conference can experience the additional impact that many have already experienced before you.

Conference Ambassadors of Leiden

Leiden is proud of its reputation as city of science, reaching far beyond the borders of the Netherlands. At the same time, being a city of science requires raising one's head above the ground to continue participating at the very top. Being seen and heard as a world player is essential.

In 2014, the municipality of Leiden, Leiden University, Leiden University Medical Center, Leiden Convention Bureau, and the Leiden hospitality sector joined forces in order to promote Leiden's excellent achievements. This marked the beginning of the Leiden Ambassadors Network, which rapidly developed into a tremendous success. The network boasts over 120 members, which is unique to the Netherlands.

The conference ambassadors are mostly from Leiden or connected to the city and are known for their achievements in their academic field, deeds, and insights. They are true captains of their own industry and their field of research. They are keen to advertise the city's strengths and to consolidate and affirm the identity of Leiden as a city of science and culture. The ambassadors do this by inviting international congresses within their respective fields or networks to Leiden. Judging by the impressive results of their efforts, they do this with much vigor and passion!

There are numerous advantages to hosting a conference in Leiden with the help of one of our Ambassadors. Having a Leiden-based top-researcher function as the face of your scientific event in Leiden will boost the engagement of the delegates to the event. A conference is an effective way of building contacts and networks with international colleagues, especially for young people in the early stages of their careers. Furthermore, a conference is a perfect platform to highlight a particular milestone or celebration.

Leiden Convention Bureau supports the Ambassadors in practical ways, such as providing them with information about Leiden and the Netherlands as a congress destination. In addition, it is an effective liaison in contact with many relevant organisations and supports the acquisition process with custom-made bid books, presentations, and brochures. Leiden Convention Bureau also organises site visits, where the delegation of a selection committee can experience for themselves what makes Leiden a suitable choice for their next event.

Sustainability

Footprint

The ecological footprint of congress and meeting participants is determined to a considerable degree by accessibility, the congress destination, the venue, catering and accommodation. Because of its favourable location, both nationally and internationally, Leiden has the edge.

Green Key

All companies in Leiden have a so-called Green Key label. Green Key is a leading global environmental certification group. Reduction of energy use, waste, emissions and operational costs are monitored. In addition, organisations invest in the involvement by its personnel, clients and surrounding parties. The Leiden caterers have embraced the principles of sustainability. At the majority of congresses, vegetarian meals are the standard and meat or fish is offered as an option. Waste is minimal and only local or FairTrade ingredients are used.

Sustainable Development Goals (SDG's)

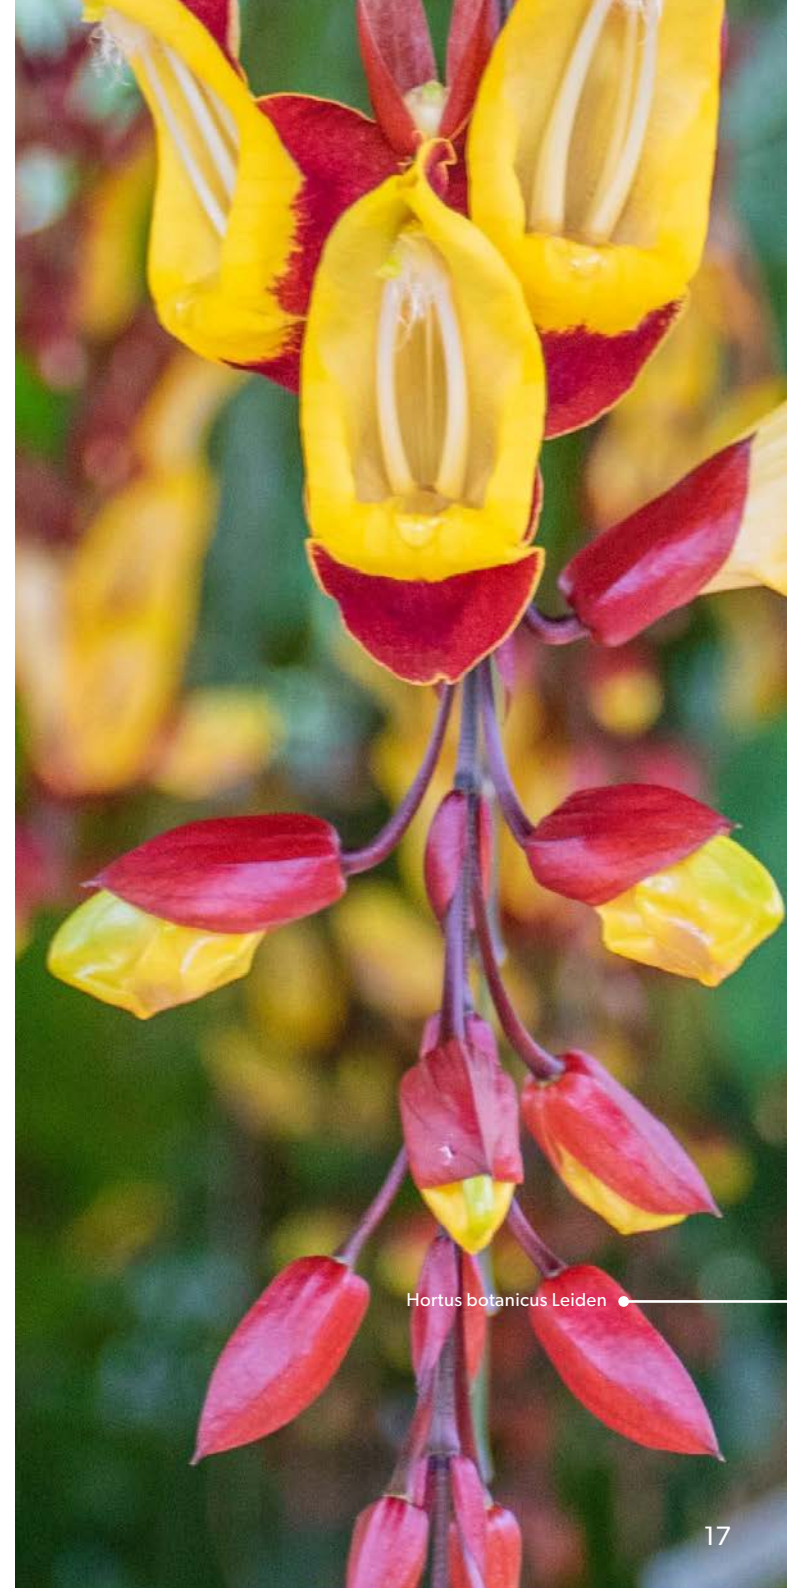

In Leiden, the municipality is making a pro-active and diligent effort in pursuing and achieving the set Sustainable Development Goals. Together with the inhabitants of Leiden, the municipality in their policy is working hard on creating a more sustainable, diverse and durable city for the future. In Leiden, the focus has been put on 'Good Health and Well-being' (3), 'Quality Education' (4), 'Sustainable Cities and Communities' (11) and 'Partnerships for the Goals' (17).

Global Goals Municipality

Leiden has joined the Association of Dutch Municipalities as a 'Global Goals' municipality. With this label, the municipality of Leiden promises to always connect and intertwine the worldwide sustainability agenda into its policy. Examples of this promise include the reduction of inequality, societal integration, a pleasant and safe living environment, sustainable production and consumption of goods, and qualitative and participative governance.

Climate Capacity Building Programme

The Climate Capacity Programme is an initiative by the Netherlands Bureau for Tourism and Congresses (NBTC) and the Travel Foundation. Leiden&Partners has joined this initiative, which has set as its main goal to ensure that destinations are made sustainable on an individual level. The Programme combines both theoretical knowledge and practical experience to come to a tailor-made solution for each destination. The focus is put on increasing organisational decisiveness and professionalisation in making both leisure and business travel more sustainable.

Accessibility

Leiden is in a perfect location. The city is close to major cities such as Amsterdam, The Hague and Rotterdam. Furthermore, everything within the city of Leiden is also close to each other: conference venues, the university, the historical city centre, the canals, hotels, attractions and the many monuments of Leiden are all within walking distance.

Internationally well accessible

The Netherlands is widely considered to be one of the most easily accessible countries in Europe. Within the country, Leiden has a particularly favourable location. Amsterdam International Airport 'Schiphol' is just 15 minutes away by train, and Leiden Central Station is one of the ten largest train stations in the Netherlands, with connections to high-speed rail to countries like Belgium, France, Germany and United Kingdom. In addition, the city is located between the A4 and A44 highways, with connections to all international motorways on the European mainland and the United Kingdom via the North Sea ferry.

A compact city centre

Due to the compact nature and the historical features of Leiden's city centre, going by foot or by bicycle are the preferred modes of transport to get from A to B. Every highlight of the city is within walking distance, and there are many locations where one can find bikes for rental. The city buses in Leiden drive fully electrically, and the very stable and frequent timetable makes sure guests will get to their destination very swiftly. There are plenty of parking garages in the city centre, and a larger car park area at the edge of town. From there, free electrical shuttle buses will take you directly to your destination.

Culture

Leiden, where culture meets science

Leiden is endowed with a rich cultural heritage as well as world famous sons and daughters. Much of its treasure has been well-preserved and still enchants today's visitors to the city. Moreover, virtually all of it is within comfortable walking distance.

Leiden flourished during the 17th century. Historic canals still ring the picturesque city centre with impressive city mansions. The monumental Hooglandse Kerk (± 1315) and Pieterskerk (± 1100) churches are even older, surrounded by a maze of narrow medieval streets. The hidden courtyards and gable stones still manifest the trades of the original occupants. Today, many old houses are turned into restaurants, bars, galleries, design studios, bookstores, vintage shops or boutiques. Leiden's Burcht, the ancient fortress located at the intersection of two branches of the river Rhine, offers spectacular views over the city.

The thirteen museums – of which four national museums – make Leiden the Netherlands' third museum city, after Amsterdam and The Hague. Their collections are varied and often unique in the world. Many of Holland's master painters had strong connections to Leiden, such as Rembrandt, who was born and educated here.

The Pilgrims also play a part in Leiden's history. Fleeing from religious persecution in England, they were welcomed in Leiden, where they stayed for 12 years before crossing the Atlantic Ocean towards 'the New World' on the Mayflower. As a result, they are nowadays commonly known as the ancestors of the Founding Fathers of the United States.

In Leiden, there is a big chance your scientific event will have a direct link to the cultural heritage of the city. The majority of cultural institutions are simultaneously available as venue for your conference or event. The Leiden Schouwburg – as the oldest theatre in the Netherlands – not only still functions as the city's main theatre, but is also very suitable for events of a certain stature. The two grand churches of the city are often used as impressive backdrop to big events. Moreover, the museums of Leiden play a double roll: on the one hand they are a cultural institution, yet on the other hand they are a perfectly suitable venue for your event.

Leiden Region

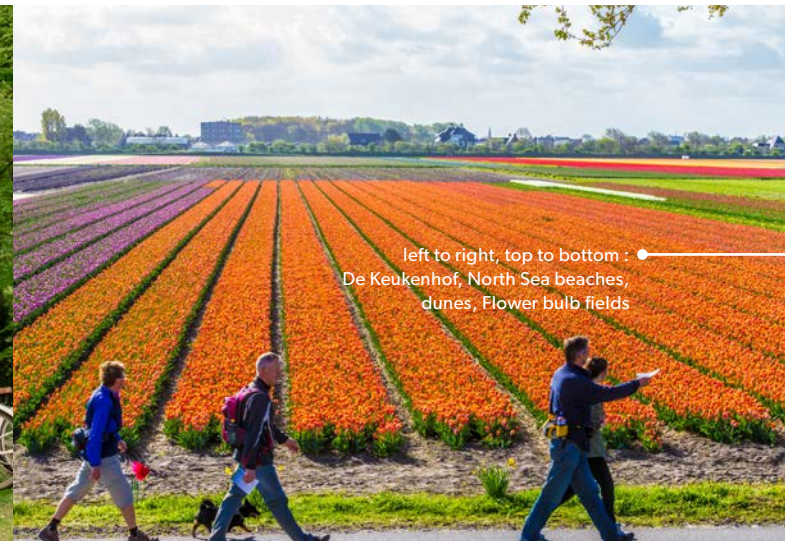

The historical city centre is not the only feature that makes Leiden an attractive conference destination. Leiden is located in a marvelous region where you will find the world renowned colourful flower fields of the 'Bollenstreek', the stretched beaches at the North Sea coast, many characteristic towns and beautiful castles.

Leiden at Sea

At a mere 15 kilometers from Leiden, you can find the stretched North Sea Coast. The coastal towns of Katwijk, Wassenaar and Noordwijk all offer a lively beach with plenty of restaurants and bars on the sandy beach. A stroll along the beach is highly recommended, both in summer and in winter.

Dunes

The many cycling routes provide the perfect way to discover the dunes of the Leiden Region. The National Park 'Hollandse Duinen' comprises of more than 60 km² of Natura-2000 area, among which the areas Berkheide, bordering Katwijk,

De Keukenhof, North Sea beaches, dunes, Flower bulb fields

the Coepelduynen and the Panbos forest, as well as the dune area Meijndel in Wassenaar. The landscape here is truly unique, as it came to be over 5000 years ago due to the rise of the sea level.

Floral splendour

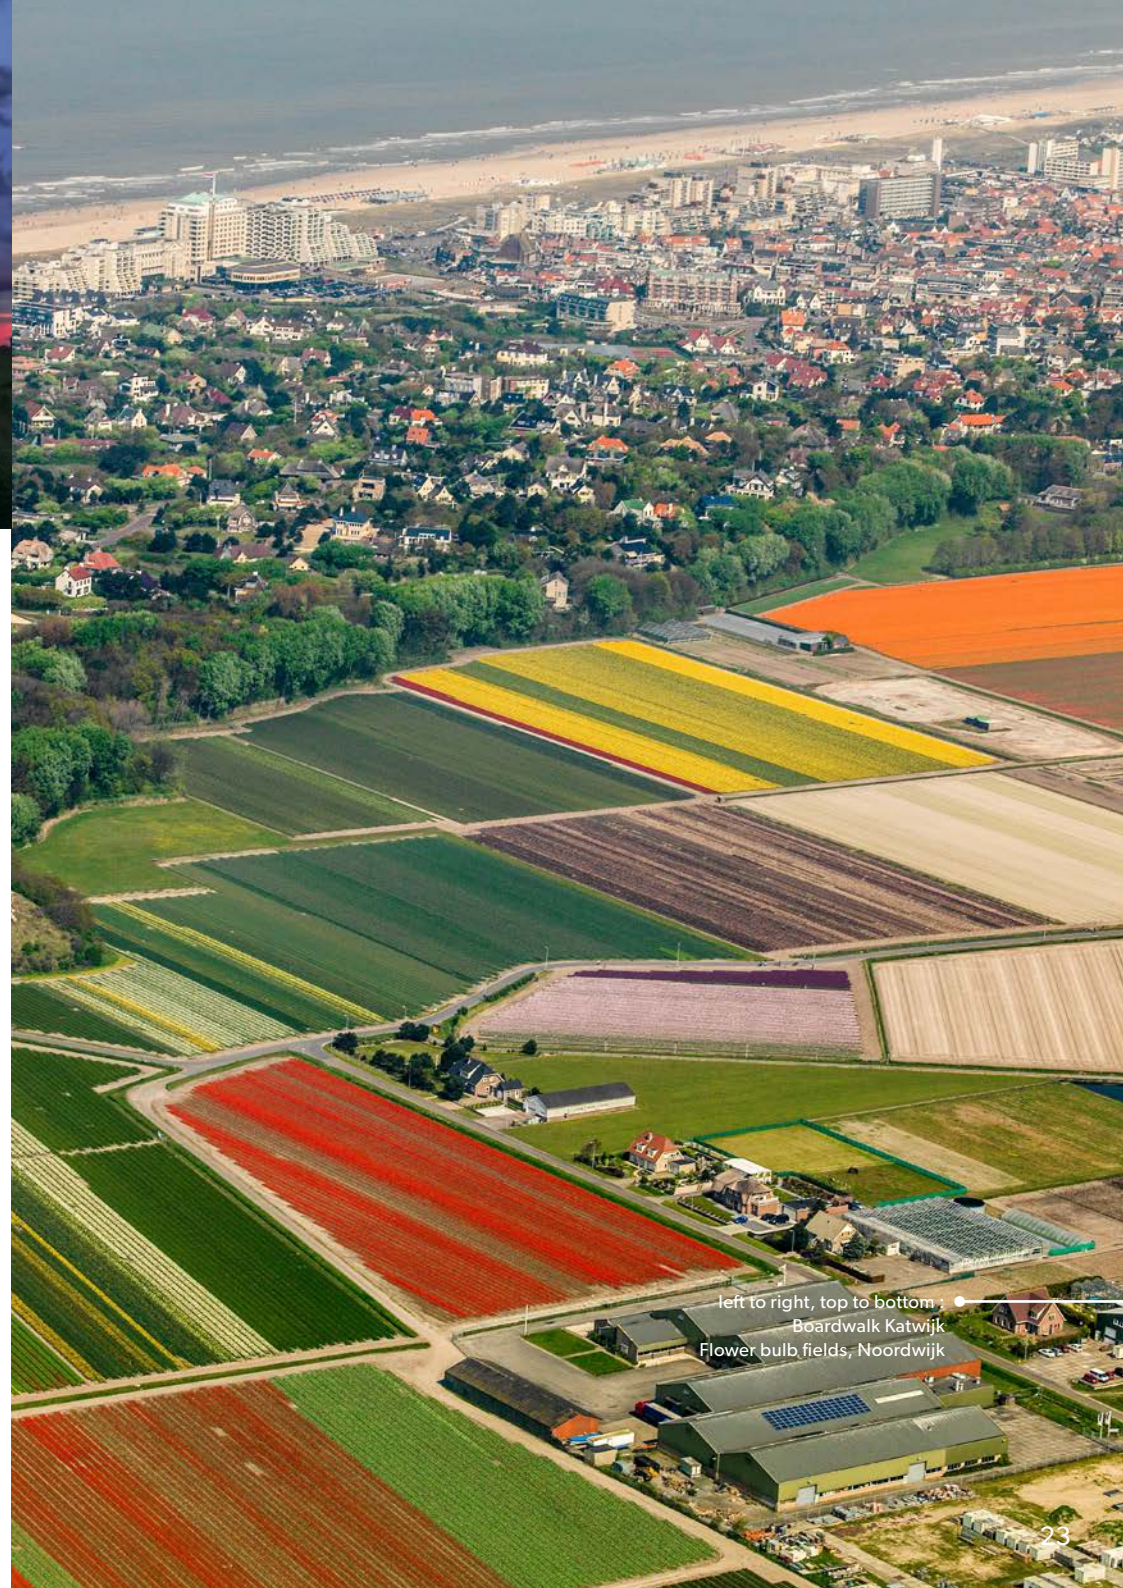

In between Leiden, the beach and Amsterdam, lies the 'Bollenstreek', the Bulb Region. The Bollenstreek is the world famous area where you will find the beautifully coloured flower fields in spring. In the centre of the Bollenstreek you find Keukenhof Gardens, the yearly exhibition of spring flowers. Keukenhof Gardens is one of the most visited attractions in the Netherlands each year.

The region by water

In the Leiden Region, you will find many waterways, lakes and of course the North Sea. A perfect way of experiencing the beautiful nature is by getting aboard roundtrip cruise or by renting your own boat and go on adventure.

In between the major cities

Amsterdam is the capital of the Netherlands, The Hague is home to the Dutch government and royal family, and Rotterdam is the largest shipping port of Europe. These three major cities, all completely different, are found within a radius of 35 kilometers from Leiden. You can easily visit these cities by public transport.

League of European Research Universities (LERU)

The League of European Research Universities celebrated its 20th anniversary in Leiden in May 2022. The anniversary was celebrated through a multi-day conference for the 23 leading European research universities that are connected to LERU.

The anniversary conference was focused on 'the distinctive role of academic institutions to nurture resilient and sustainable societies.' During the conference, leading European research universities exchanged ideas with representatives of governments and businesses. The conference featured lectures by Mariya Gabriel (European Commissioner for Research, Innovation, and Education) and Maria Leptin (ERC president), among others.

According to Mirella Imthorn, organiser of this congress on behalf of Leiden University, the anniversary meeting of the LERU was a great success. "The anniversary celebration was a great success mainly because of the beautiful venues, the good care that was provided before and during the conference. Also, the attendance was high and the presentations and discussions were inspiring. The LERU congress was a great networking opportunity for European research activities, representatives of governments and companies.

The event participants enjoyed the Hortus botanicus, the Academy Building of Leiden University and the Stadsgehoorzaal, 3 great places in Leiden. The city was sunny and vibrant and guests were able to use the hotel facilities in Leiden. Leiden Convention Bureau put up beautiful flags throughout the city to welcome the guests. All in all, highly recommended!"

Mirella Imthorn says she is proud of Leiden: she thinks Leiden is a city where there is always something to discover and believes this conference was a great achievement.
