Maastricht | Plankstraat 25 | T. +31 (0) 43 - 325 44 65

Dear visitor

covery at TEFAF Maastricht 2023. TEFAF is an experience like no other. Collectors are afforded the opportunity to select from the finest, rigorously vetted works presented by 260+ of the world's most eminent specialists. Encompassing 7,000 years of art history, it is a place where you can engage with works of great historical merit and beauty. A visit to TEFAF is certain to make an indelible impression and our visitors look forward to returning year after year.

We extend our sincere gratitude to the city of Maastricht and the MECC for their collaboration and support, and to the many businesses and partners in the city who make TEFAF such a special experience.

Hidde van Seggelen

Chairman, Executive Committee

TEFAF is immensely proud to present an immersive and profound experience once again in the beautiful city of Maastricht, which we hope will inspire both new and established collectors of art, design, and antiques. We are delighted to warmly welcome you on this exceptional journey of dis-

Welcome

For one week every year, Maastricht can rightfully claim the title of global city of art. We owe this great honour to The European Fine Art Fair (TEFAF), a renowned, global event that feels extraordinarily at home in our city.

The world's largest and most famous art fair was born and raised in Maastricht. There is a blood tie between the fair and the city: the organizers can count on the commitment of local and provincial governments, and the city can count on TEFAF in terms of the calibre and image it enjoys.

Besides the high-quality art, the event's international nature is also an essential ingredient of the success. And Maastricht just happens to tick that cosmopolitan box. Located in the heart of the Meuse-Rhine Euroregion, we are in an area of Western Europe that brings together three nationalities, almost four million inhabitants, four internationally focused universities, two airports, two high-speed railway stations, several conference centres, and much more.

In this striking Euroregion, two major cultures – Germanic and Latin – have rubbed shoulders for centuries. The people and businesses who call this part of the world home have a naturally global outlook. Even in this modern age, it is culture that unites us. Without culture, today's Euro-regional partnership would never have flourished. As a cultural highlight, TEFAF makes an essential contribution to this. That is why we look forward to meeting the many exhibitors and visitors from all over the world, every single year. We would like to extend a very warm welcome to you all.

Curiosity

In 1955, LIFE Magazine published an interview with the namesake of this technological invention, the great Albert Einstein himself, shortly after his death on April 18th of that same year. He said: “The important thing is not to stop questioning. Curiosity has its own reason for existence. One cannot help but be in awe when he contemplates the mysteries of eternity, of life, of the marvellous structure of reality. It is enough if one tries merely to comprehend a little of this mystery each day.”

Curiosity is what made Einstein one of the greatest scientists of our time. But I think it is also the very foundation of art. Featuring over 275 prestigious dealers from all over the world, TEFAF remains a showcase for the finest art works currently on the market, all born out of curiosity the artist had or has for the world, for life and for love.

As for you, the beholder of all these things beautiful, welcome to Maastricht, to Limburg and please enjoy your stay at TEFAF 2023.

Emile Roemer

Governor / King's Commissioner
in the Province of Limburg

The province of Limburg, the city of Maastricht and TEFAF share a passion for thinking outside the box and pushing boundaries.

Boundaries that do not even seem to exist, just across the street from the MECC building, where scientists are creating art, themselves. In their Pathfinder lab, they are researching the possibilities of constructing the Einstein Telescope in Limburg soil: a cutting-edge scientific research centre for measuring ‘gravitational waves’, which would enable them to peer into the history of our universe.

MAASTRICHT CITY GUIDE 2023
ART & ICONS WALK WITH TEFAP

ART & ICONS WALK with TEFAP

Maastricht has a rich history, which is embellished by innumerable art treasures and architectural gems. The Arts & Icons Walk with TEFAP will take you along a number of well-known as well as lesser-known works of art and unique locations. Although you can start this walk at any of the points of interest in this brochure, it officially starts – how else – at MECC, TEFAP's home base.

1. Vertical elements

Forum 100
Five vertical elements, executed in bronze, have been erected in front of the entrance to the Maastricht Exhibition & Conference Centre. This work by Piet Killaars dates from 1988 and is a typical example of Geometric Abstraction, an art movement that harks back to the unquestionable laws of nature.

2. Provincial Government Building

Treaty of Maastricht
The Provincial Government Building houses a permanent exhibition about The Treaty of Maastricht (1992), one of the most significant treaties in the history of Europe and European integration and which resulted in the birth of the euro. The summit conference that led to the ratification of the treaty was held in this building.
www.limburg.nl

3. Stars of Europe

Avenue Ceramique 300
Stars of Europe was commissioned in 2001 in honour of the ten-year anniversary of the Treaty of Maastricht. It was initially conceived by Italian artist Maura Biava, who graduated from the State Academy of Fine Arts in Amsterdam in 1999, and ultimately designed by Dutch architect and designer Ruby van den Munckhof.

4. Bonnefanten

Avenue Ceramique 250
The Bonnefanten museum rises to greet you along the Meuse. Designed by the famous Italian architect Aldo Rossi, the museum is composed of three separate structures, of which the central one gives way to a cylindrical building. Its lofty dome, crowned by a belvédère, commands fabulous views of both the river and the city. The art on exhibit at the Bonnefanten dates from 1100 to 1800, but the collection also encompasses some fine works of contemporary and applied art (primarily silver and ceramics). The museum naturally also offers temporary or other exhibitions.
www.bonnefanten.nl

5. Centre Céramique

Avenue Ceramique 50
Maastricht's iconic public library was completed in 1999. The architect of this building, which was beloved by both locals and tourists from the outset, was Jo Coenen. Centre Céramique underwent a metamorphosis in 2021 in order to broaden its range of public services. The building is now home to the Kumulus music school, for example. Later this spring, Centre Céramique will be partly redesigned and transformed into a museum dedicated to Maastricht's multifaceted history.
www.centreceramique.nl

6. Helpoort Museum

Sint Bernardusstraat 24b

The Helpoort (Hell's Gate) is the oldest city gate in the Netherlands, and the only one still standing in Maastricht. It was built in April 1229 subject to the consent of Henry I, Duke of Brabant. The gate served as part of the city's fortification system for around two centuries. www.vestingmuseummaastricht.nl

7. Limburg Regional Historic Centre 'crack in the wall'

Sint Pieterstraat 7

It is simply impossible to ignore the gigantic 'crack in the wall' in the listed building that houses the Limburg Regional Historic Centre. The stone window frames look as if they could come tumbling down any minute, were it not that the one at the bottom is still attached to the building on one side. www.rhcl.nl

8. Statue of d'Artagnan

Aldenhofpark 4-5

D'Artagnan met his death at Maastricht's Tongeren Gate on 25 June 1673 during a bloody battle between the French and Staatse (Government) troops. A bronze statue was erected in 1977 to mark the spot where this legendary captain of the musketeers was killed. The statute was designed by sculptor Alexander Taratynov. Marking 350 years since the death of the Musketeer d'Artagnan, the year 2023 will be full of activities – some taking place during TEFAF – to commemorate this historical event.

9. Passageway of wisdom

Grote Looierstraat 17

Artist Borek Sipek (1949-2016) was commissioned by the Art and Heritage Committee of Maastricht University to create this Passageway to Wisdom. It serves as the entrance to the university library on Grote Looiersgracht in Maastricht's old city centre.

10. Museum of Natural History

De Bosquetplein 7

The Natural History Museum of Maastricht is located in the former Convent of the Grey Franciscan Sisters in the Jekerkwartier district. The museum is renowned for a collection of fossils that is unique in the Netherlands and dates back to the Cretaceous Period. It includes various Mosasauruses, Prognathodons, and hadrosauruses. www.nhmmaastricht.nl

11. Jan van Eyck Academy

Academieplein 1

The Jan van Eyck Academy is an international post-academic institute for the visual arts. The institute is located in a listed building designed by architect Frits Peutz and built between 1958 and 1961. To mark its 75th anniversary, the Jan van Eyck Academie invites you to take a look at its social media channels and explore its illustrious history. www.janvaneyck.nl

12. Museum of photography

Vrijthof 18

Fotomuseum aan het Vrijthof is a privately owned photography museum located in the centre of Maastricht. The museum is housed in what was formerly known as the Spanish Government Building. The building originally served as the country seat of Emperor Charles V in the 16th century, and is thought to be the oldest preserved residential building in the city. The museum boasts a special TEFAF room, a gift from the art fair bearing the same name. www.fotomuseumaanhetvrijthof.nl

13. Treasury of Saint Servatius

Basilica Saint Servatius,
Keizer Karelplein 3

The shrine of St. Servatius (also called the 'Noodkist') contains the relics of the Netherlands' first bishop. It is an exceptionally fine example of the Maasland goldsmiths' art. A number of unique objects are on display in this treasury, which are carried through the streets of Maastricht on the occasion of the Procession of Holy Relics once every seven years. www.sintservaas.nl

14. Theatre aan het Vrijthof

Vrijthof 47

From a palatine (non-defendable royal residence) to a convent to a city palace to a theatre: that is the history of this prominent building on Vrijthof square in a nutshell. www.theateraanhelvrijthof.nl

15. Marres, House of Contemporary Culture

Capucijnenstraat 98

Housed in a historic residential building in the centre of Maastricht, the mission of Marres is to explore contemporary art in the broadest sense of the word. The museum was founded in 1998 and owes its name to the Marres family, a family of brewers who occupied this house for most of the 20th century. www.marres.org

16. Dominicanen bookshop

Dominicanenkerkstraat 1

The unique Dominicanen Bookshop has been housed in the age-old Dominican church ever since the autumn of 2006. It is considered one of the most iconic bookshops in all of Europe. www.libris.nl/dominicanen

17. Sphinxpassage

Sphinxcour

The Sphinxpassage is a 120-metre-long covered tiled passageway that runs from the Eiffel Building to the Pathé cinema. Almost 30,000 tiles bring the history of Maastricht's ceramics industry, and more specifically the Sphinx tile factory, to life in words, images, and objects. The Sphinx quarter, located around the Eiffel Building, is developing rapidly into a lively modern neighbourhood. www.sphinxkwartier.nl

18. Bureau Europa

Boschstraat 9

Bureau Europa is a platform for architecture and design that organizes exhibitions as well as lectures, workshops, city tours, and innumerable activities focusing on architecture, urban development, and design.

www.bureau-europa.nl

19. Muziekgieterij

Boschstraat 5

Muziekgieterij is one of the Netherlands' youngest pop music venues. Founded in 2004, this venue has grown into one of the foremost cultural hotspots of Maastricht and the Euregion in less than two decades. The venue is located in the former Timmerfabriek. The factory buildings were once part of the Royal Sphinx crystal and ceramics factory.

www.muziekgieterij.nl

20. Lumière Cinema

Bassin 88

The Lumière cinema has been housed in this beautiful new building in the Sphinx quarter since September 2016. The listed building was built in 1910 to serve as the power plant for the old Sphinx factories. Restaurant and art house cinema.

www.lumiere.nl

21. Statue of Minckelers

Markt square

Maastricht-born Jan Pieter Minckelers was the inventor of gas lighting. A statue created by Bart van Hove was erected in memory of him on Markt square. An eternal flame burns symbolically from a gas torch held in Minckelers' hand.

22. City Hall

Markt square 78

The City Hall on Markt square was constructed between 1659 and 1664 under the guidance of master architect Pieter Post. Its tower dates from 1684 and contains a carillon with 49 bells that is still regularly played. Featuring beautiful wall tapestries, stucco work, ceiling paintings, and mantelpieces, the interior is also of considerable interest.

23. Het Dinghuis

Kleine Staat 1

The Maastricht Visitor Center is located in the Dinghuis, a building that carries a long history with it. Its name comes from the Dutch word dingen, which means 'to administer judgement'. Even today, the Dutch word for legal proceedings is geding. The building dates from 1470.

www.bezoekmaastricht.nl

24. Onze Lieve Vrouwe Basiliek

OLV Plein 7

In the 5th century, a church had been already erected on the spot where the Basilica of Our Lady stands today. This was probably the oldest Christian church in the Netherlands. It may have been built, in turn, on top of the remains of a Roman Temple. The basilica is a splendid example of Roman architecture and contains various works of art of an exceptional quality. The treasury contains many interesting objects of religious art and examples of fine craftsmanship.

25. Roman cellar, Hotel Derlon

OLV Plein 6

The Derlon Hotel is located on Onze Lieve Vrouweplein. In this cosy museum cellar, Maastricht in the Roman Era lies literally at your feet, thanks to the extensive collection of archaeological artefacts on display here.

26. Amazon on Horseback

Op de Thermen

A small man who makes big statues, artist Arthur Spronken (1930-2018) is considered the founding father of the Limburg sculptors. His equestrian statues beautifully illustrate the dynamics of the body.

27. Mestreechter Geis

Het Bat

This character of the archetypical resident of Maastricht has been captured in the bronze statue Mestreechter Geis, as a certain nonchalance, Weltschmerz, or laissez-faire. The statue was made by the Haarlem-born artist Mari Andriessen.

28. Saint Servatius Bridge

The oldest bridge in the Netherlands may have been rebuilt several times, as well as renovated, bombed, and even blown up but its very core has always been preserved. An icon of Maastricht, the bridge defines the skyline of the oldest Roman city of the Netherlands.

29. Maastricht Railway Station

Stationsplein 27

The Maastricht Railway Station was restored to its former glory at the end of 2021 after a renovation that lasted two and a half years and thanks to which many beautiful details can be admired once again. It was designed by George van Heukelom and opened in 1916.

TIP

Zonneberg Caves | Slavante 1

In the depths of the Zonneberg caves, a museum has been dug into the marl where a number of truly unique items are on exhibit, including some fine charcoal drawings. Here, you will find yourself standing eye to eye with a Monosaurus several metres in length hewn into the marl. Another highlight is a life-sized charcoal rendition of Rembrandt's Nightwatch.

EXHIBITIONS

Hrair Sarkissian: The Other Side of Silence

Location Bonnefanten

Date until 14 May 2023

First retrospective exhibition of one of the most prominent conceptual photographers of our time. Using life-size photos, the Syrian-Armenian artist Hrair Sarkissian lays bare the wounds of conflicts. The 'Other Side of Silence' displays important works from the past fifteen years of his career as well as new assignments. Sarkissian uses his conceptual photography to explore the various ways in which controversial events in history are told and disseminated.

www.bonnefanten.nl

Táctica Sintáctica

Location Marres, House for Contemporary Culture

Date 9 March to 28 May 2023

The exhibition by Diego Bianchi and Mariano Mayer goes against the rules of the museum to give the body space. The works of art are spread out across the rooms; some partially hidden and others only visible if visitors are prepared to crouch, climb or kneel. The radical question is: What type of movement and identities lie hidden and are reflected in art exhibitions? And what does the body itself want?

www.marres.org

Frozen Music (Bevroren Muziek)

Location Bureau Europa

Date until 28 May 2023

Music and architecture speak the same language of rhythm, contrast, proportion, dynamism, and harmony. Composers and architects have been inspiring one another for centuries. Music also has its own architecture: from the design of instruments to the aesthetics of the musical notation itself. In the exhibition, the design of space and sound is explored with the help of interactive installations, art, film and music, architectural drawings, and scale models.

www.bureau-europa.nl

'FAMOUS' by Terry O'Neill

Location Fotomuseum aan het Vrijthof

Date until 10 september 2023

This retrospective exhibition of the British celebrity photographer Terry O'Neill (1938–2019) presents more than 125 portraits of international music legends, film stars, and fashion icons, predominantly from the sixties and seventies. Terry O'Neill is one of the world's most iconic and influential photographers of the past 60 years. Members of the British royal family and prominent politicians have also stood in front of his camera. With his informal, intimate photos, he reveals the human side of celebrities.

www.fotomuseumaanhetvrijthof.nl

Portraits of here (Portretten van hier) / 1955–1966 Frans Grummer

Location Centre Céramique

Date until 16 April 2023

The photographer Frans Grummer was a freelance photographer based at the Vrijthof from 1955 to 1972. He died in 2021 leaving behind an impressive archive containing thousands of negatives. In addition to interesting advertisement photos for companies such as Mosa, and Sphinx, more than 4,000 portraits depicting people from Maastricht were found. This exhibition shows a selection of these.

www.centreceramique.nl

CONCERT Orchestra of the Eighteenth Century and the Royal Conservatoire The Hague – Side by Side

Location Theater aan het Vrijthof

Date 11 March 2023

The combined energy of the Orchestra of the Eighteenth Century and the passionate top students of the former music department of the Royal Conservatoire The Hague (Royal Early Music) ensure that this annual project is one of the season's highlights. This time, the professionals and the eager new generation of singers and instrumentalists will perform Handel's Messiah, under the direction of Daniël Reuss. A first-class musical experience.

EVENTS Transitions Video Art Festival

Location various locations in the Sphinx quarter

Date 9 to 14 March 2023

A six-day audiovisual festival set to take place in the former industrial Sphinx quarter in Maastricht. It combines showings at fifteen locations with special film programmes and aims to be a haven for filmmakers and a candid audience. 'Transitions' provides a high-quality programme in a contrasting atmosphere: experiential rather than judgemental, it is an opportunity to become acquainted with the future classics now. transitions.video

Maastricht Antiquarian Book & Print Fair

Location St. John's Church

Date 10 – 12 March 2023

The Maastricht Antiquarian Book and Print fair provides a very diverse selection of books, charts and prints, it's a candy store for collectors and lovers of antiquarian books and prints. Around thirty renowned antiquarian book traders from the Netherlands and abroad will be bringing the most valuable and interesting items from their collections to Maastricht at the largest antiquarian book and print fair in the Benelux region. The theme of this year is "d'Artagnan".

www.mabp.eu

REGION Chaim van Luit

Location Schunk Heerlen

Date until 24 September 2023

Chaim van Luit will be presenting a new installation, about the past and present of mining, in the showcase at the Glaspaleis (Glass Palace). For Chaim van Luit, the physical search is essentially the work of art. He collects unique traces of human activity and sometimes also that of animals. He does this during treasure hunts – sometimes spanning several years – through the woods of the German Eifel region, in the Limburg marl caves, and across towns and fields throughout Europe.

EXHIBITION The object itself as a chronicle (Het object zelf als kroniek)

Location Suermond Ludwиг
Museum Aachen

Date 9 March to 25 June 2023

The exhibition presents works from the Fricke Collection by 26 photographers, including Franz Schensky, Rosemarie Clausen, Hermann Claassen and many other artists. Supplemented by their background stories, the photos offer us the opportunity to obtain a second, deeper insight into what was actually recorded.

EXHIBITION Bags: inside out

Location Hasselt Fashion Museum

Date until 14 May 2023

Almost 300 objects illustrate the centuries-old and worldwide fascination for bags: from the iconic Brillant bag by Delvaux and Kelly bag by Hermès to tiny vanity cases, military backpacks, and luxurious travelling cases. The exhibition not only considers the manufacturing process of the bag but also the ingredients that determine its success. After all, a bag not only has a functional purpose but is also an expression of identity and status.

EXHIBITION Autopia

Location De Domijnen Museum of Contemporary Art, Sittard

Date until 2 April 2023

A world full of cars – for some people a utopia, for others a nightmare. Olaf Mooij (1958, Rotterdam) sheds light on our close relationship with the car and the consequences of it through sculptures and installations. 'People have a personal connection with cars. They would do anything for them.' The exhibition includes a brief history of the car, and of the only Dutch car manufacturer.

Welcome to the most exciting Art Museum of Limburg!

A stone's throw from TEFAF is one of the top art museums in the Netherlands: Bonnefanten. Here you will find beautiful old masters, medieval wood carvings, Maastricht silver, cutting-edge contemporary art, and unique temporary exhibitions of exciting international artists. And of course, a delicious museum café, plus a surprising museum shop.

Must see! Rembrandt's Standard Bearer on Tour & More

Rembrandt's Standard Bearer is on tour in the Netherlands. In March, this masterpiece can be admired up close at Bonnefanten. We proudly present a selection of masters alongside: a rebellious 16th-century flag-bearer, from the surroundings of Pieter Brueghel the Younger; the contemporary flags installation To Breathe - The Flags by Kimsooja; and authentic banners of the Oud-Limburgse Schuttersfederatie. A must see for art lovers!

10 March: Bonnefanten Free Friday

Friday evening, 10 March, the doors of Bonnefanten will be opened from 8pm to 11pm. Free entrance for everyone! You are welcome for an exciting Free Art Night Out at the museum. With music, performances, workshops and more. Would love to see you there!

BONNEFANTEN

There is more than meets the eye.

TEFAF concert with The South Netherlands Philharmonic

Promenade from Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition

The TEFAF concert has now become a tradition at The European Fine Art Fair (TEFAF) in Maastricht. Following last year's stellar performance by the renowned solo harpist Anneleen Lenaerts in St. Janskerk church, the baton will be passed to The South Netherlands Philharmonic – led by conductor Eduardo Strausser – at this year's concert.

On the evening of Wednesday 15 March, the orchestra will play the very apt Promenade from Mussorgsky's The Pictures at an Exhibition, again in the enchanting and acoustically outstanding St. Janskerk church on Vrijthof square. Violinist Christina Büttner will accompany SALLY Dansgezelschap in a Duet voor viool en dansers (Duet for violin and dancers), which they performed at the King's Day concert.

Actor and director Michel Sluysmans will perform in a monologue by Jibbe Willems, Alle Mensen worden Broers (All people become brothers).

To conclude, The South Netherlands Philharmonic will perform Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, famous from the film The King's Speech and characterized by Wagner as 'the apotheosis of dance itself'. The TEFAF concert is organized by Chapeau Magazine in collaboration with The South Netherlands Philharmonic, Toneelgroep Maastricht, and SALLY Dansgezelschap, and supported by Theater aan het Vrijthof.

Date Wednesday 15 March 2023

Location Sint Janskerk church

Start 8 PM

Duration Approximately 1 hour

Title TEFAF concert, in collaboration with The South Netherlands Philharmonic, Toneelgroep Maastricht, and SALLY Dansgezelschap.

Admission €39.00.

Maastricht is culture

The numerous historic buildings, works of art, and traditions tell the story of Maastricht's illustrious past, and the city cherishes its status as 'The Netherlands' second monument city.' Its other title, 'The Netherlands' second city of culture,' is another rare accolade and source of pride. Maastricht has a vibrant and thriving cultural scene. With its mix of old and modern architecture, the international university city is a magnet for 'creatives,' researchers and makers who go there to study and to make their dreams a reality. Reflecting this, Maastricht offers study programmes in every art form.

Maastricht Institute of Arts (Zuyd University of Applied Sciences)

The arts and, by extension, art education fulfil a vital role in our society's development. Looking at our society and, indeed, the world as a whole, the word 'change' seems to most accurately encapsulate the current status quo. Art and creative technology are fundamental to all societies. Without creative talent, there is no society. Maastricht Institute of Arts, which is part of Zuyd University of Applied Sciences, celebrates its 200th anniversary this year. Commenting on this milestone, Director Angenieta Kuijpers says: 'It's an open community where you are challenged. Challenged to explore. Challenged to develop yourself and to reflect. Challenged to be creative. Maastricht Institute of Arts is a workspace that is both intercultural and international. A workspace where you develop expertise. Where talent blossoms. Where people with similar and contrasting outlooks come together, a vital place in the city. A place that is alive and exhilarating. Where you are welcome, where you feel at home. A place,' Kuijpers concludes, 'that you come to for a dose of optimism.' www.zuyd.nl/

Conservatorium Maastricht (Zuyd University of Applied Sciences)

Maastricht has an international conservatory, firmly rooted in the region yet also connected with all parts of the world. In the words of its Director, Mare de Groot: 'We believe in a collective spirit, the desire to challenge each other and to create together. To move and to add value, in and with music. Conservatorium Maastricht enables the 'moving musician' to realize their own ambitions in various fields of music, to move and to stimulate. 'We use our passion for development to get the best out of the students. We believe in the strength of our community, made up of students, teachers, and the field of work. Teamwork is essential, and the best education stems from close cooperation,' says De Groot.

The study programmes in Classical Music, Jazz Music, and Music Teaching prepare students for a career in the ever-changing professional field, enabling them to get the best out of themselves. This is achieved through individual artistic development, active collaboration, integration of theory, professional practical experience, cross-departmental activities, optional subjects, and the development of entrepreneurial and research skills.

Toneelacademie Maastricht, institute of performative arts (Zuyd University of Applied Sciences)

'Toneelacademie Maastricht institute of performative arts is a close-knit community of thinkers, risk-takers, and doers,' explains Director Rob Ligthert. 'We work hard, with a lot of passion. Actors, performers, directors, stage designers, and teachers - here, they develop in to 'oeuvre builders.' Maastricht provides the haven they need. Countless nationally and internationally famous actors in TV and film trained at the institute of performative arts, as did many directors, artistic directors, stage designers, and playwrights and screenwriters. The institute runs both bachelor's programmes and a master's programme. Free shows, performances, installations and exhibitions are regularly staged. 'All schools should be Art Schools' - Bob & Roberta Smith (artist Patrick Brill).

Jan van Eyck Academie

As a multidisciplinary post-academic institute, the Jan van Eyck Academie supports a myriad of artistic endeavours by offering its international group of participants the time, space, and expertise to further develop their practice. Each participant has a private studio, receives guidance from advisers and experts, and can make use of its facilities and labs. The academy is not only a place for research and experimentation, but also a place for discussion, public debate, and cross-fertilization. Self-development is tied in with collaboration and exchange.

Says Hicham Khalidi, Director of the Jan van Eyck Academie: 'For 75 years, the world-renowned Jan van Eyck Academie has been welcoming artists, designers, curators, architects, writers, and other creatives to Maastricht for an artist residency.

We dedicate this celebratory year to our artists, to the communal spirit of the academy, and are committed, together with our partners and the city of Maastricht, to ensuring continued support for these pioneers in the arts over the next few decades of the academy's existence.'

Maastricht University, bachelor arts and culture

Maastricht University welcomes anyone who is keen to understand present-day society from cultural and other perspectives.

In Maastricht, culture is not set in stone, but is in perpetual motion and continually evolving. As a term, culture denotes the results of intellectual and artistic creativity and reflection, such as scientific and literary texts or artworks. It also denotes the cultural practices which shape peoples' daily lives and are expressed in their individual tastes and behaviour. Lastly, culture lies at the heart of social processes in which people express and challenge ethical, aesthetic, economic, and political meanings and values.

At the Netherlands' most international university, students get an education in a vibrant setting that embraces all the different cultures, and collaborate on research that contributes to the global issues of our time.

Chalk drawing – a replica of the Night Watch - in the Grotten Zonnenberg mines. Done by Jules Sondejcker in 1900, restored by SRAL

De Stichting Restauratie Atelier Limburg/ SRAL, the conservation institute

Founded as a regional workshop for Limburg, over 35 years SRAL has grown into a large and leading institute in the Netherlands for practice, research, and teaching in four restoration disciplines: paintings, sculpture, historic interiors, and modern art. The SRAL studios are based in the 'Wiebengahal' industrial monument (1912). In the adjacent Bonnefonten, there is a public-viewing studio where museum visitors can watch SRAL restorers at work. The institute is nationally and internationally renowned for its scientific publications, academic teaching, and the working methods it develops, and techniques for carrying out restoration. SRAL restores entire historic interiors at all sorts of locations throughout the Netherlands, ranging from medieval frescoes, large wall hangings, gold leather wallpaper, ornamental mantelpieces, and church interiors to modern wall art.

Since it was founded, the restoration work has been combined with a strong teaching department. From 1990 onwards, SRAL initiated and developed restoration as a field of study, the basis for the present-day Master's programme at the University of Amsterdam (UvA). Over the same period, its collaboration with Maastricht University has grown, in MACCH, at the FASoS, and on the Maastricht Science Program. www.sral.nl

Rembrandt, The Standard Bearer, 1636, oil on canvas, 118.8 × 96.8 cm. Collection Rijksmuseum Purchased by the Dutch State with support from the members of the Rembrandt Association, the Rijksmuseum Fonds and the VriendenLoterij.

This year's Chapeau/Maastricht Region stand at TEFAF (no. 820) will be decorated in the style of Rembrandt's oil-on-canvas painting The Standard Bearer, which will be on display at Maastricht's Bonnefantenmuseum in March. The TEFAF stand will echo the painting's style and run a range of activities related to this work of art. Also on display are several artworks by the late Limburg sculptor Arthur Spronken, in anticipation of a book to be published in June on 'Arthur Spronken's never-before-exhibited collection of artworks'. A prepublication of this book will feature in a special brochure available at TEFAF, and this edition of Chapeau Magazine will also shine the spotlight on it.

The Chapeau/Maastricht Region stand is a meeting place initiated by Chapeau Magazine, the Municipality of Maastricht, the Province of Limburg, Brightlands, Maastricht University, MECC Maastricht, and a number of other partners from the region. Its aim is to strengthen the link between TEFAF and the Maastricht-Limburg region.

The stand is located in the Expo Foyer upstairs, directly accessible from the fair on the ground floor. The entire Foyer will be furnished as business lounges and restaurants, complete with a spacious, central terrace.

And just like years gone by, the stand will feature a small TV studio to film the daily programme 'TEFAF TV by Chapeau'. The programme will be broadcast live at hotels in Maastricht as well as online at www.tefafvnews.com and www.chapeaumagazine.com.

The Einstein Telescope could be 'gamechanger' for Limburg and the Euregio

The South Limburg border region comes out as major contender in global race.

The South Limburg border region could become home to a prestigious European project set to reveal the secrets of the universe. The Einstein Telescope will be ten times more accurate than the existing gravitational-wave observatories and offer a unique opportunity for us to get closer to gravitational waves, laser wavelengths, and black holes. It could even help us solve the mystery of the Big Bang and further unravel the theory of relativity. Professor of Gravitational Physics at Maastricht University, Stefan Hild, sums up what is already happening in Maastricht, where work is continuing on the ETpathfinder in preparation for the Einstein project. 'We are developing and trying out new technologies here that we can ultimately use in the future Einstein Telescope. This is, in fact, a test set-up... a large miniature version or rather a prototype of the state-of-the-art telescope that will be built after 2025.'

Project agency leaders

Dutch project agency leaders Guido Derks and Stan Bentvelsen say that the new telescope would mark a momentous occasion in studying the basic building blocks of our universe, the forces between them, and the structure of space and time.

Guido Derks was previously General Director of the Province of Limburg and former Director of Urban Development for the Municipality of Maastricht. Stan

Bentvelsen is Director of Nikhef, the organization at the cutting edge of the science within the project. Together they lead the project agency founded on 1 January, located in the former building of the De Limburger newspaper, next to the Maastricht Exhibition & Conference Centre (MECC). This is also the same R&D site where the ETpathfinder is also set up, the prototype used to develop and test new technologies that could ultimately be used in the proposed Einstein Telescope. The purpose of the ETpathfinder is to keep the technology up to date.

A two-horse race

The Einstein Telescope will have three arms that are ten kilometres long, using measurement detectors with unprecedented reliability. But building the telescope in South Limburg is by no means assured. Sardinia has also thrown its hat into the ring for the project, which will not only bring scientific insights, but also create a lot of employment opportunities. The Dutch-Belgian-German scientific cooperation is working to attract this high-quality installation in the South Limburg border region. Guido Derks said, 'We had detailed discussions before the summer with the National Growth Fund committee, under the leadership of Jeroen Dijsselbloem and Prince Constantijn of the Netherlands, which resulted in the allocation of €930 million from the national budget. That was a massive achievement. The National Growth Fund agreed that this type of investment in scientific infrastructure will lead to more opportunities for economic development and broad prosperity in the region, the Netherlands, and the wider Eurogip.'

Guido Derks

Economic spin-off

A study by Technopolis states that the region can expect a large economic spin-off from the project, with €3.60 generated for every euro invested.

This is the biggest project that has been given the go-ahead in the European Strategy Forum on Research Infrastructures (ESFRI) roadmap – a strategic instrument aimed at strengthening scientific integration in Europe. An ESFRI project has to be supported by at least three EU Member States. This project is very costly, but it is also a long-term one. If the decision on where the telescope will be built won't be made until 2025, then it won't be operational until 2035, but it will be possible to take measurements for 50 years after that.

Beautiful surroundings

Derks continued, 'We are more than aware that the Einstein Telescope would be located in beautiful borderlands between the Netherlands, Belgium, and Germany. We should take this into account, of course. We are factoring in sustainability during the preparation works, construction, operation, and even decommissioning. We are also mapping out how disruption during construction can be reduced as much as possible. Once the Einstein Telescope is complete, you'll hardly see anything above the ground, so we can continue to cherish the tranquillity of the beautiful landscape for the years to come.'

Opportunities

Guido Derks said, 'Of course, we are doing all we can to bring the telescope to our border region, but there is another contender in the race. Sardinia is certainly going for it, and we aren't ruling out a potential bid from Saxony in Germany. We are currently creating opportunities for industry and innovative business through valorization, thanks to LIOF and POM – the regional development agencies for the Limburg regions in the Netherlands and Belgium. We have set up a large lab in Maastricht, which now serves the Einstein Telescope. Maastricht University's reputation for the sciences has also been structurally boosted by this development. This is incredibly important for businesses in the region. This type of opportunity to attract a whole new large-scale economic ecosystem comes once in a blue moon.'

Economic impact

Stephan Satijn, who is in charge of Economic Affairs and Education on the Provincial Council of Limburg, underlined the huge economic impact this project could have for the whole region. 'If we manage to secure this project, it will be a bigger infrastructure project than the Willem Alexander tunnel in Maastricht. And while you won't see much of it above ground, it will have a huge spin-off on the economy in Limburg and the Euregio, not only creating 1400 permanent jobs but also attracting an array of specialists in this field. That makes our region very appealing at a global level, also for other sectors too.' Satijn is pleased with how the international cooperation on the project has gone so far. 'The universities of Maastricht, Liège, Aachen, and Leuven are closely involved. We already have the political support of North Rhine-Westphalia in Germany, and this year we are determined to get Belgium fully on board. Dutch Prime Minister Mark Rutte has already discussed it with his Belgian counterpart, Alexander De Croo. The bid will be ready by 2025, and the winning location must then be chosen.' Satijn knows from experience that the Italians are powerful diplomats when it comes to lobbying. 'Just look at how much money Brussels sends to Italy.

So, we need to make our bid look as strong as possible and come out on top in Europe. Getting the support of countries like Germany is crucial. That's why it's great that North Rhine-Westphalia really wants to invest in it too. I dare say that this will bring about a true scientific revolution in the world. Just think how wonderful it would be if we had this right here in our region. And I am also thinking about how much this will boost our educational institutions and strengthen links with the Brightlands campuses, where innovation is also in full swing.'
